Thought for Meditation

"It should not be lost that the example of such victorious faith is a Gentile woman, doubly an outsider. But the text should not be thereby an embellishment and placed in the service of ideology, as though the Canaanite is an aggressive single parent who here defies cultural taboos and acts to free Jesus from his sexism and racism by catching him in a bad mood or with his compassion down, besting him in an argument and herself becoming the vehicle of his liberation and the deliverance of her daughter."

- Eugene Boring, Professor of New Testament, Brite Divinity School, Fort Worth TX
